David J. Francis is the Founder and Director of the Africa Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies in the Department of Peace Studies and holds the UNESCO Chair of African Peace & Conflict Studies at the University of Bradford. His main research focus is on the peace-security-conflict-development nexus in transition societies in Sub-Saharan Africa. He consults widely for a range of institutions and development co-operation partners as well as African governments and agencies. His recent publications include 'Uniting Africa: Building Regional Peace & Security Systems' Ashgate, 2006 and 'Peace & Conflict in Africa' Zed Books, 2008 (forthcoming edited volume).
